NEW YORK TRIBUNE. FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1918 9

Predicts G.O.P. Of Michigan Will Bar Ford

State Chairman Says Party Will Nominate Pro-American

Leaders Resent Action of Wilson

Three Candidates Are Expected to Enter the Primary Race

John D. Mangum, chairman of the Michigan Republican State Committee, at the Eastern headquarters of the Republican National Committee, in the Knox Building, in this city, yesterday said the Republican organization of the Wolverine state would not indorse Henry Ford for United States Senator, or Mr. Mangum passed practically all day with Will H. Hays, chairman of the national committee, and Chairman Hays was present when he declared the position of the Michigan Republicans toward Mr. Ford's candidacy. Asked to direct a message to the Michigan Republican organization indorse Henry Ford for Senator?" Mr. Mangum replied:

"The Republican organization in Michigan will certainly not indorse the candidacy of Mr. Ford, or of any one else who has opposed the policies of the Democratic political organization in the country, in an effort to control the Republican party, as fairs in a state 100,000 Republican will not affect us. The Republican primary will continue, of course.

Will Select a Pro-American

"There are several candidates, and a Republican will be nominated who is supremely pro-American, who has always been and will forever be for the prosecution of the war, and who will stand when elected for a great principles of the party. This Republican, whoever he is, when nominated will be elected as a Republican United States Senator from Michigan."

Mr. Mangum left last night for Washington to see Chairman Hays and the Republican Senators and Congressmen, before starting the campaign to defeat Mr. Ford. He told Chairman Hays that Michigan Republicans, generally speaking, were much exercised over the action of President Wilson in his interference in Michigan politics in behalf of Mr. Ford.

Along with him copies of the Democratic Statement to the Voters of Michigan," the objectionable part of which is as follows:

"To the end that partisan discord as to national affairs may be reduced to a minimum, we invite our Republican brethren to indorse our primary election candidacies of Mr. Ford as United States Senator, to the personal ambitions of their contenders, and to be laid aside for the duration of the war; and let unity of political action be to our nomination of Mr. Ford as United States Senator express the sentiment of the people of Michigan, irrespective of party affiliations, in one great American army under Woodrow Wilson, to win the war."

"The people of Michigan have been looking up the record of Henry Ford and Truman H. Newberry," the statement said, "and they assert that Mr. Ford has not voted for a Republican candidate for President in the last twenty years, and in that period, they assert, the only candidates of any party he has voted for have been Democrats.

"Under the election laws of Michigan, enrolled Democrats can vote for Republican candidates in the primaries, and Democrats can vote for Republicans the same way.

"The present campaign indicates that three Republicans will enter the primaries for the Republican nomination: Ex-Governor Chase. S. Osborn, Truman H. Newberry, Secretary of the Navy under Roosevelt, and Senator William Alden Smith, whose term is expiring.

Paterson Bars Study of German; To Destroy Books

PATERSON, N. J., June 20. — The Board of Education voted last night to discontinue instruction in German in the public schools of this city and to destroy the German textbooks now in existence. This action was taken despite the protest of John R. Wilson, superintendent of schools. Two hundred and seventy of the 840 pupils have been studying German for several years.

"I am pleading," said Mr. Wilson, "for fair play for the boys and girls who, when they entered this high school, took up the study of the German language in good faith. Students now in the third and fourth years started this study before this country entered the war. In my estimation, it is un-American and unpatriotic to give them anything but a square deal. I do not believe that public clamor should be allowed to enter this matter."

School Commissioner Abram Bustein replied that public sentiment must be considered and German eliminated because the public demanded it. The inconvenience of a certain proportion of the pupils should not be considered, he said, as everybody suffered inconvenience in war times.

"I don't think that we can afford to continue the use of the language any longer," George P. O'Dell, chairman of the board, agreed. "So far as breaking up rules and regulations is concerned, all of this has been done in this war. We have changed our habits. If the people wants something, I believe that the colleges will adjust this matter to study foreign languages. The study has been dropped, since the action is general throughout the country."

Former Mexican Agent of Kaiser In Custody Here

Felix A. Summerfeld Under Probe of Department of Justice Officials

Taken at Hotel Astor

Arrest of Mining Engineer Expected to Yield Startling Developments

Felix A. Summerfeld, said to have been an agent of the Wilhelmstrasse in Mexico, where he gained the confidence of President Madero, and became chief of the Mexican secret service, was grilled for hours yesterday by Chief Charles J. De Woody, of the Department of Justice, and was held for further examination.

The Federal authorities attach great importance to the capture of Summerfeld, who was taken in custody on Tuesday night at the Hotel Astor, where he has lived for the last four years. After Chief De Woody had finished his interrogation, he turned the man over to Rufus W. Sprague, the new director of the Enemy Alien Bureau, who committed him to the Raymond Street jail, pending further examination and investigation.

Summerfeld, who is thirty-nine years old, and wealthy, is a mining engineer by profession. He is a graduate of Berlin University, and served in the German forces during the Boxer campaign in China, in 1901. He is a reserve officer in the German army, and it is understood that he returned to Germany at the outset of the war.

According to the Department of Justice agents, Summerfeld came to this country first in 1905. His mission at that time is unknown. In 1906 he returned to Germany and entered the army.

He returned to America in 1909 and went to Mexico, where he became interested in extensive mining operations. He remained in the United States at frequent intervals. This was about the time Madero came into power in Mexico, and Germany was flooding the country with her trained agents. On Arrival of Trench and Cornish agents, Madero learned the mining engineer at the head of his secret service.

Summerfeld, educated in European intrigue, soon knew the secrets of the Mexican government. When Madero was killed Summerfeld was thrown out of public office and immediately established himself with one faction and then another. He posed as an American sympathizer in Mexico and said his patents were Swiss.

In 1918, when German influence in Mexico began to be felt, Summerfeld was watched by the Secret Service on the border. Before this time he had been acting for the various revolutionary factions in their purchasing agent in the United States.

Just before Villa's attack on Columbus, in March of 1916, Summerfeld disappeared from the border and came to New York, where he stopped at the Astor as a retired mining engineer. While he was there he is understood to have received detailed reports for Berlin regarding Mexican and American affairs on the border.

Mr. Sprague said that his recommendation for the internment of Summerfeld has been made and will not be held the completion of a searching inquiry. Summerfeld's case has apparently been called to the Department of Justice during the last month for examination, and startling developments are looked for when the case is completed.

Further charges are against him at this time, it was learned, and he is known to have had frequent conferences with Frederick Stallforth, president of the Botany Worsted Mills, of Passaic, N. J., with offices at 200 Fifth Avenue, before the mills were taken over by A. Mitchell Palmer, Custodian of Enemy Property. Mr. Stallforth was interned as a dangerous enemy alien at Camp Oglethorpe.

denunciations of the day—directed against the New York bar.

The government had been questioning him concerning his efforts to persuade Henry A. Wise to continue as attorney in his case. The fear of an unfavorable reaction against himself, O'Leary said, was, to his mind, the sole cause of Mr. Wise's withdrawal from the action.

"I'm sorry to say," he then added, "that the lawyers of the City of New York have destroyed the best traditions of the bar of New York. They have been influenced by an hysterical public opinion, by the play of petty prejudices to which they meanly pander, obsessed with qualms of cowardice, to refuse the case of a man charged with treason. They fear to lose the little business they have, no one in my right mind stand practically alone—and the lawyers of this city are cowards. That is the condition of the bar of New York, and it's not an American condition."

A moment later he said:

"If you can go out and get a lawyer for me, I'll pay you $1,000." And to Mr. Marshall, who had come to offer to prosecute me, I'll give you $1,000."

"The New York Call is in reference to arrangements he alleged it had with the government, and the accusations contained in the Tombs also came from the same loathing concern," Mr. O'Leary said.

"The Call' attacked the draft," he said, "and 'The Call' was not suppressed, as I was, whereas I was always for the draft. Why should they suppress me and allow such a publication as 'The New York Call' to go unscathed? It's because 'The New York Call' has a big organization behind it, whereas behind me there's nobody."

This was in the course of cross-examination by counsel for a remark that he did not think the government would send him to the penitentiary, as it had Max Eastman, the Socialist, and other defendants in the recent trial.

The testimony in that case, O'Leary said, was "unfair, unjust, partial in great measure," it was "a free man?" returned O'Leary. "I was coming back to be put behind bars, to be put on trial, to be sent away perhaps for twenty years, for what I wanted to prevent for the future, for my own ingenuity."

Later, however, he admitted that even in jail it would have been entirely possible for him to have drawn a power of attorney.

Profuse in Testimonials

In testimonials to himself and his brothers Jeremiah O'Leary was profuse and eloquent.

"If I wanted to do a thing I thought was right, and so do, and nobody in this world could stop me—nobody!" he asserted at one point.

This is merely one of a number of remarks of more or less similar import made by him while his alliances to his belief that he was being "persecuted" "because" they made their appearance in his discourse recurrently throughout the day. Alternating with them were innumerable references to his unswerving physical courage and inability at various times to sleep.

Colonel Felder put his star witness through a recital in minute detail of the happenings on the night preceding O'Leary's flight, which is by story the most important point of which his story differed from Lyons's.

There was not present when the tickets were bought and had both idea, so Lyons asserted, that Jeremiah was going to Reno to procure a divorce decree.

Lyons was the man from the first who urged going West—presumably, O'Leary said, because he himself wanted the trip and the fee that would accrue to himself.

The course was discussed finally between Lyons and himself while they were walking in the evening, where they might have been overheard.

"I told him," O'Leary said, "Lyons suggested" formula I took from his brother's place were set borrowed in Lyons's presence. They were taken because the witness expected to go on a hiking trip, as he had promised his brother he would, and had no old clothes with him in the city.

His mind was first turned toward the far West as a haven, O'Leary said, by a book entitled "On the Overland Trail," which he read on the train. It was while he was in the vicinity of Salt Lake City that the notion of flight first occurred to him, but even then he had no definite plan in mind. He had had spent so much time laboriously preparing.

The course of O'Leary's narrative was interrupted frequently by verbal minor witnesses to give testimony, which included that of Mrs. Lyons, as to her understanding the good character of the defendant, were Supreme Court Justice John W. Goff and Surrogate Joseph D. Cohalan.

Cheer Fireman Saving Flag

A crowd of thousands watching a fire yesterday in the two upper floors of a six story building at 310 West Thirty-ninth Street, burst into cheers as a fireman appeared in a smoke-filled window of the third floor and hauled in an American flag. The fifth floor was occupied by the C. & T. Printing Company, and the sixth, by Edward E. Spencer, jr., manufacturer of machinery. The damage was $25,000. Two alarms were sent in and the tenants were ordered out of adjoining buildings.
