

ing hospital supplies from the neighborhood. Her remains were borne to the grave by her six grandsons, all of whom bore her surname. Peter S. Garrison also was a member of this old church for more than half a century and furnished the bass for the choir for fifty years. He lived to the age of eighty-six years and seven months.

Naomi Phillips was the youngest sister of J. R. P. Garrison. Her husband, Robert Phillips, was born in Bucks county, Penn. He was a miller by trade and a member of the society of Friends. They had six children, viz.: Edward, Willet, Harriet, (dead) Mariah, Emma, and Howard. Edward, the eldest, was a Homeopathic physician at Cape May, N. J., for a third of century or more, and lived there until his death, Sept. 20th, 1909. He left five sons, the oldest, Russel, is photographer for the New York Herald. One son, Walter, is a doctor at Cape May, another son, Will, is in Pulare county, Cal.—the orange section of the state. Willet, second son of Naomi and Robert Phillips has two children,—a son named Fred and a daughter named Nettie. Mariah Phillips married Isaac Griswold of Algonquin, Ill. and moved to Cal. and died there; leaving six children. One daughter, Harriet, married a man named William Putnam of Washington; they live twelve miles from Hood's Canal; he keeps a hotel and is connected with the stage line to Olympia. The other children are married and live in Seattle, Wash. Emma, youngest daughter of Naomi and Robert Phillips married William Sorter of Denver, Col., and they had one son named Robert. Her husband died there and she remained a widow for many years; then she married Asa B. Sears, her "first love", and they now live in Goodrich, Mich. Howard, the youngest son of Naomi Phillips still lives on the home farm and runs a dairy. He has one son named Walter Leroy. Their eldest son is dead. The Phillipses were a strictly